CARD OF THANKS

The family of Gladys Morrill

passed away suddenly July 23, 1968, wish to extend our sincere thanks to all who helped share our loss with their kind expressions of sympathy.

To the family, friends and neighbors who so generously contributed the numerous floral tributes, our eternal thanks. A special thanks to Dr. Young and Dr.
Hammill, Edson and John Greenleaf and to Beatrice Burris for

"Our Mother"

"Widowed at an early age left with a daughter and two sons,
she wasted no hours grieving
her loss,
but made work and faith,
her full time boss.

Through all our young and ten-years, her love was constant, always there, to ease our youthful fears.

later on, God saw fit, another partner to provide, one who shouldered cares and burdens, even carried our load beside.
when her elder son, in the prime of his life, was taken from us, his children and his wife, again, she stoically carried on though her grief was such, her heart was torn.

She cherished her children, her neighbors and all the rest, and when grief or pain struck them, her heart ached in her breast.

The loss of her second partner,
who had all our lives so blessed,
was the sad and final blow,
and God knew she needed rest.
So he closed her eyes, for that final journey, where there is no
sadness and tears,
where we will all be together
again
one day, just like in earlier years.

your daughter,
Catherino

GREENWOOD CITY

— Mrs. Colista Morgan, Corres. —
It was an afternoon of glorious sunshine with scarcely a cloud. A gentle breeze from up the "spring road" whispered, "Come".

Curious about the changes since I last wandered that way, a year ago, I set out to follow the old road and climb again to the spring, our spring, high on the hill top. There certainly had been a change! How could so many alders grow in a year's time! Even the path had now disappeared. I refused to turn back once I had started so threaded my way to the base of the steepest incline, some 150 feet up.

Once at the spring I just had to lift the cover to peep in. I watched the water, like little fingers at play, forever moving, pushing up the gleaming sand, always changing, yet ever the same.

A myrtle warbler darted in and out among the low branches of the spruces piping its clear broken trill.

Having climbed this far I continued on into the hills to the abandoned places where man had long ago cleared the land but now the kindly hand of nature had hidden its trace.

The call of the inquisitive chickadee or the whiplash cry of Flicker came from the beech trees with their great gray trunks standing guard.

The squirrels were very presuming. They either thought I was one of them or not worth minding. They'd give me a saucy glance then go about their business as if I were not there, leaving a picture of living beauty and freedom here on the hillside... beyond the limits of the valley.

At my feet were clusters of waxlike flowers, Indian-Pipes, remarkable in many ways and with a history of their own.

"In shining groups, each stem a pearly ray,

Weird flecks of light within the shadowed wood,
They dwell aloof, a spotless sisterhood...." (Mary Higginson).

All this, timeless and beckoning in a grove of silence except for the language of the wind.

My path now lay in a sharp slant, the lower hills heavily plumaged with various gradations of green. In the darker more woody stretch of fir and pine there was a fragrance that lingered where the sunlight seldom found its way except through interlacing branches.

On a moss covered trunk of a fallen tree near which I sat to rest, and listen, there grew a young spruce which had shot upward probably from a seed left there years ago. It had clasped its roots around the dead tree and had reached the earth. The old log having finally decayed made the spruce's roots seem to have started from the air, standing upon legs like a spider.

From there I looked down on the broad-shouldered hills and ridges leading to the valley, winding my way by great tree trunks and leaving behind the health giving tang and the somber silence of the endless forest and the infinite purity of the atmosphere.

One moment there was the forest apparently going on forever and in the next I emerged into a clearing where sat a great gray stone. Another stop for listening. For what? I did not know.

The breeze stirred bringing a breath of coolness but the rough gray granite against which I leaned still held the warmth from the brilliant sun in the white-blue sky overhead.

It was only a little distance now down the slope beyond which I found an old road leading toward home.

I saw the mountains again looming upward to meet the white light of the heavens and I was reminded of the words of John Burroughs,

"The most precious things in life are near at hand, without money and without price. Each of you has the whole wealth of the universe at your door. All that I ever had, or still have, may be yours by stretching forth your hand and taking it."

Mrs. Ruth Hastings, Bethel, was a recent caller at Mrs. Clyde Morgan's. Other callers have been Katie Tamminen, Patricia and Pamela Perham, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Brooks, Mrs. Arthur Newell, West Paris; Mrs. Ina Smith, Barre, Vt.; Mr. and Mrs. Edwin French and boys, South Paris; Mrs. Leonard Holt, David and Ann, and Doris Hayes, Town; Mrs. Lauri Tamminen, Yarmouth.
